How to Use Pages

When choosing the amount of lines your child will use for their copywork, take into consideration what your child can handle in terms of amount of writing. Little hands can tire quickly. Some young children can become very overwhelmed when they see too many lines when it comes time to write. Don't put too much pressure to write for an extended period of time. Most young children can only write a word or two before becoming tired, while others can write for up to 5-10 minutes. This is why I've included many different amount of lines. The pages with sets of lines could be used for different writing selections on different days.

Lastly, the coloring is not at all necessary, it's only there if your child is interested. Some children find no pleasure in coloring. Remember, these pages are first meant for copywork and then they can take some time to color them, maybe as a reward for doing such a great job writing.

Enjoy!
